3 Security Advantages of Managed IT Services

Managed IT services, or outsourced remote network management, can help your business in many ways. It's a cost effective way of having your IT infrastructure monitored and maintained by experts instead of hiring an IT director. Or, it can free up your IT director and IT staff to work on more important projects than daily maintenance. But other than productivity and peace of mind, what are the security benefits of managed IT services?

Here are three security advantages you get with remote network management.

With headlines rolling in almost daily about massive security breaches and threats on your network endpoints, IT security professionals are becoming desensitized to cyber risks. Last year saw a year-over-year growth in reported breaches of nearly 20 percent, hitting a record of over 5,200 incidents in 2017. That's 7.8 billion exposed records, costing the global economy $600 billion.

Warning Signs of Phishing Emails

A phishing email is a malicious attempt to obtain your sensitive information by tricking you into believing the message is valid and opening it. Phishing attempts masquerade as legitimate or trusted entities, which makes them difficult to detect. Here are some warning signs you should be on the look out for:
